ABOUT CHEF LEMAIRE

Alain Lemaire, also known as Chef Lemaire, is an award winning chef out of South Florida. He is the Co-Owner and Executive Chef of Sensory Delights Catering, a full service boutique-style luxury company that caters to weddings, social and corporate events. A native of Port-au-Prince Haiti, Alain first discovered his interest in food while watching his mom and grandmother cooking. As the years went by, Alain started to develop an increasing passion for food and foodservice. That passion has led him to attend the A.S. in Culinary and B.S. in Food Service Management programs at the acclaimed Johnson & Wales University, where he graduated Magma Cum Laude. Thanks to his heritage, and having spent most of his culinary career in the South, Caribbean, Latin and Southern Cuisines play a major role in his cooking style.

CHEF LEMAIRE'S PROFILE

Chef Lemaire featured on Food Network's show "Luda Can't Cook" with acclaimed actor, rapper, and entrepreneur Chris "Ludacris" Bridges as a Culinary expert during the Taste of Haiti episode. In addition, he has competed on the hit shows Chopped, and Cutthroat Kitchen. Chef Lemaire has participated in, and featured as a guest chef in several special dining events and food festivals including being a guest chef at the James Beard House, Charleston Wine & Food Festival, Beaufort Wine & Food, and more. He was Haiti's Culinary Ambassador at the Global Traditional Cuisine Event hosted by the Secretary of Foreign Affairs of Mexico, where he showcased authentic Haitian cuisine. Thanks to his skills, and knowledge, he has been asked to conduct trainings in several places such as Haiti, throughout the USA, Kenya and more.
