ABOUT CHEF ALAIN

Award-winning Chef Alain Lemaire, a native of Port-au-Prince, Haiti, ignited his culinary journey at an early age. His fascination with food blossomed as he watched his mother and grandmother work their magic in the kitchen, instilling in him an appreciation for the art of cooking. By the time he graduated high school, his passion for food had evolved into a full-blown obsession.

Today, Chef Lemaire stands as the Co-owner and Executive Chef of Sensory Delights, a distinguished full-service catering company based in South Florida. Additionally, he is the visionary behind the brand "Ou Manje Deja?", a testament to his commitment to Haitian and Caribbean culinary excellence and innovation. Chef Lemaire's talent has not gone unnoticed, as he has graced the screens of several acclaimed TV shows. He served as the host chef of the "Taste of Haiti" episode on Discovery+'s "Luda Can't Cook" series, alongside the renowned rapper, actor, and restaurateur Chris "Ludacris" Bridges. Furthermore, he has showcased his culinary skills as a contestant on Food Network's hit series such as Fire Masters, Cutthroat Kitchen, and Chopped.

Beyond television, Chef Lemaire's culinary career has taken him to numerous food events and festivals across the United States and overseas. From the Charleston Wine & Food Festival to the New York African Restaurant Week, his culinary creations have captivated audiences far and wide. He has also lent his expertise as a panel speaker at esteemed gatherings like Munaluchi's Coterie Retreat and A Week on Haiti, further solidifying his status as a respected figure in the culinary world.

With an unwavering dedication to his craft and a passion for creating unforgettable dining experiences, Chef Alain Lemaire continues to push the boundaries of culinary excellence, leaving a lasting impression on all who have the pleasure of tasting his creations.
